How to ride a Tokai Bus in Mishima

1. Normally you enter a bus by way of its back door -- not the front. The front door is the exit. (Models of Tokai Bus are varied, some bus have only one door at the front to get on/ off). As you get on the bus, you will see a little machine out of which is poking a small paper ticket; take the ticket. This ticket has a number that represents where you got on. The only time the machine does not offer a ticket is when you are boarding a bus at the starting point of its route -- at the bus station, usually.
2. The announcement tells you where the bus stops next. When you hear your bus stop, you press a buzzer.
3. You do not pay for your ride until you leave the bus. At the front, above the driver and where everyone can see, there is a board that displays numbers for each stop on the route. Under each number shows the fare that needs to be paid when you leave the bus; these fares slowly increase as the bus travels further and further. You are charged for the distance you ride; short trips are cheaper, of course.
4. If you do not have the proper change for your trip, don't panic. Every bus has a money changer near the driver. It will break 1000 yen notes, as well as 500 and 100 yen coins, into smaller change. Many people take a moment to break a bill when the bus stops at a red light, so they'll be able to exit the bus quickly at their stop.
